Things We Damn Well Feel Like Saying

Foreword by Strasberg Alum, Alec Baldwin

Alright New Yorkers. It's your favorite Long Islander – Alec “Kill ‘Em” Baldwin. Now I'm known for a lot of things: Boss Baby, collecting novelty clocks, and pescetarianism. I'm even known for writing the Plague foreword just a few years ago for the weird digital COVID edition. But do you know what my real claim to fame is? My crummy record with commercial airlines.

See, back in 2011 an American Airlines stewardess with no decorum interrupted my Words with Friends at LAX to ream me out. She scolded, “Please prepare for takeoff” and “please switch off your electronic device sir.” Of course, I was taken aback. My reflex was asking “Do you know who I am?” Wish I could say I backed down there, but I stuck to my guns, murmuring that she was a degenerate @$#* and that my grandma has hotter %*@$#. It was all facetious, and none of the airline staff seemed to notice. They didn't even make eye contact with me. Indignant, I took myself and my Words with Friends to the airplane restroom, where I loudly slammed the door. It was then airport security finally revealed their prejudice for actors of my caliber, escorting me off the plane.

I'd happily flown American for 20 years, but unfortunately the current working class has no notion of service, especially not the kind I'm used to. Back in the 80s, I had a stewardess pay to blow me. Now, flight attendants are on weird power trips all the time; they get off on taking away the cellphones of A-listers and insisting on seeing my wife's ID before they serve her alcohol.

So yeah, for a while I avoided public airlines like the plague until "The Incident" transpired. I thought I would never again leave my house. I imagined myself weeping in a small, dark room for years, drowning out my millions of fans turned foes. I'd have to Instacart for the rest of my life, grocery store tabloids forever against me. The incident, of course, was my divorce. I was so heartbroken, I couldn't imagine traveling the world with anyone else.

And then I moved on, and now I have a really young wife. We travel everywhere together, set to set, LA to Amagansett, courtroom to courtroom. So I decided to bring out the big guns and take a shot at writing this foreword for Plague Magazine, the most relevant publication of my alma mater, to encourage you, dear reader, to travel the world. If you have time to read a collegiate comedy magazine, better yet write for it, then you have more than enough time to go wherever you please. Timbuktu, Cleveland, the Harry Potter World - they're all out there, waiting for you.

If you take nothing else away from this foreword, let it be this: people who don't travel suck! Face it: they're insipid, uncultured, and you can always tell when someone isn't a true Cosmopolitan. Controversial, I know! As I always say, don't shoot the messenger, shoot the cinematographer.

Locked and loaded,
A. B.

This is a grainy image of my face!

This place sucks. No help whatsoever with check-in, and it took like 3 episodes for people to realize I wasn't even dead. Continental breakfast was nothing to write home about.

As the 43rd governor of the great state of Illinois, you can bet I know a thing or two about this lovely destination. A truly wonderful spot for tourists and locals alike, and I can't recommend the mouth slugs enough!

Check out the two newest Wonders of the World!

Caesar Clickerman, a local lithium battery miner, was wandering through his neighborhood carbon dioxide factory when he saw a strange site. Authorities arrived at the scene and found this thing. With old audio recordings recovered from an ancient platform called "TikTok," experts at Sigma University discovered this object was referred to as "chree"; the exact translation is unknown. It was immediately uprooted and taken to a sterile lab for research. A cryptic message was carved into the trunk: "this is the worst timeline."

1. Chree

2. Immense Jesus

The Natural History Museum in London just unveiled its incredible new statue, one they've coined "Immense Jesus." Museum director Doug Murr announced that archaeologists "discovered and conserved" the site from a small unknown village in Brazil, before importing it back to the UK for its erection right outside the museum. The statue is now considered the latest Wonder of the World, attracting thousands of tourists, mostly Brazilians, who appear angry but we can't understand Portuguese so read it and weep, losers.

I RSVPed Too Late To My Honeymoon

The pictures from my honeymoon turned out great. Mary, my blushing bride, looked so gorgeous. The wind in her hair and Brian in her arms. Of course, I was disappointed to miss out – after all, our wedding had been magical – but, I RSVPed too late on the Google Form and my slot had already been filled.

I understand of course. The flyer said RSVP by Thursday. Frankly, I'm just grateful she sent a submission response bearing me the bad news – lest I get my hopes up about going after a late RSVP. Tardiness has always been Mary's greatest qualm regarding me, but what can I say, Google Forms stress me out.

Google Forms are endlessly definitive and my finger gets tired just by filling them out. Had I thought about it, I would have requested time and a half for my form submission, given my isolated pointer-finger arthritis. I talked to my therapist about my Google Form impotence.

She said I have commitment issues, but I'm not paying her to tell me that, so I opted out of our remaining sessions. I passed my time the best I could.

Mary and Brian had a grand seafood buffet, I had non-name-brand Honey Nut cereal with a piece of parsley to garnish; they had a lazy river, I had spinning in the bathtub with a bottle of rosé; they had a nude couple's massage, I had Ricky, the homeless man outside the gas station, give me a hug with no shirt on.

She later sent out an anonymous poll to be conducted about our overall honeymoon experience. I gave it a 3.5; I respectfully have at least one, somewhat large, complaint. On the upside, I now know an area for future self-improvement. Upon Mary's return I assured her I'd do better. I've already set a submission reminder for our daughter's birth. It's only nine months away.

I was today years old when I found out...

that you have to thank Beyoncé in your award acceptance speech or the music industry will literally kill you. I know people are threatened by my talent, like Michael Jackson, but I didn't think they'd stoop to murder. It's a good thing my car is so inconspicuous so they can't find me; no one would think to look for the Tesla covered in pictures of my face.

Anyway, after my mistake, I took refuge in Trump Tower in NYC, where I admit I had a terrible time. The mirrors were so dirty that I couldn't even make out with myself hygienically, and the sheets were so filthy I couldn't even grab myself by the pussy. Mr. Trump personally invited me to be interviewed for a cabinet position, but I don't even know if I want it now; I mean, what will I do? Hold his mugs? No, thank you. I am an artist; I create, not make, unlike Lil Tay. Either way though I wanted to be prepared for my interview so I practiced standing in corners holding various kitchen items and studied the form of Trump's previous cabinets, their width, depth, woodwork, chipped paint, dirty plates, and omg is this a used condom? Has this room ever been cleaned? Doesn't matter, Trump's cabinet doesn't need to be good, it just needs to make a statement, and who makes a bigger statement than Jojo Siwa? Definitely not Lil Tay, but definitely Beyoncé (you're such an inspiration).

Also, the lady at the desk, some Russian girl named Karma, treated me with total disrespect. She laughed when I asked for custom wallpaper of my face all over Trump Tower and she hung up on me when I asked for more mugs to practice with. Needless to say Karma is a bitch. AVOID AT ALL COSTS!!!

The CHILI's / HOOTERS HOTEL

"I was incredibly unhappy when I found out I had to fly to Montana for my job as a grifter. Luckily, I was able to stay at the Chili's/Hooters hotel! The room service here was great, and they always make sure you get a happy ending! Not sure why the chef giving me a massage needed to be naked as well, though. I'll try out the Hooters services tomorrow."

"I came here looking for a job, and so I showed the interviewer my bare chest. Unfortunately, he told me that Chili's doesn't hire male strippers. 4/10, the food was alright."

"My friend and I made a bet on who could eat the most 3 for 3's without getting violent diarrhea. I only made it 1/3 of the way before I lost the game.

The CHILI's / HOOTERS HOTEL

"I was driving on my family's annual cross country trip across Montana, when I decided to stop at the new Chili/Hooters hotel. I thought it would be the best place to take my family for some good food and even better rest. I will say the hooters floor was tempting to me, but my salary as a family influencer documenting the lives of my family of 11 living in one bus only lets me afford one 3 for 3 deal for dinner. I ordered 9 free ice waters for the kids and bottomless margaritas for me and the missus, but I noticed something was off. I guess the chili's hooters changed their uniforms. I was shocked to find that my server had ditched the typical red polos for red crop tops with owl eyes on the chesticle area. I asked the employee why they weren't in uniform and they just pointed at the penis shaped chili on their hat. 5/10 I liked the old uniform better"

Campus is in a hubbub after Ben Diddier, head of Collegiate Travel Agency, has been following around our students. He always has a little advice to give about his good old days at the big U. Well we at the High School Travel Review - The noted group that reviews travel options for high schoolers, a common thing we're all aware of - have taken a trip with Mr. Diddier Travel Agency to his Alma-mater, and we just have one word for him: No Stars! He spent the entire time rambling on about all the parties and sports matches he attended and didn't know shiznasty about Academics. That should be expected, after his only form of advertising has been loudly dictating his collegiate conquests to all who will listen. We at the High School Travel Review recommend that if you see this man on campus, do NOT give pursuit. And most certainly don't let him tell you about that time he binked the statue of old John University, the founder of Columbia University. That's how he gets you. A shitty Ivy League that used to examine guys' testicles in order to get admitted. Columbia University makes me realize how much worse of a rich kid school it is compared to NYU cause of this man. He didn't even know the academics since apparently his daddy paid for him to pass his classes. 0/10, look up better ways to find colleges.

0/10. Do NOT go to the Bahamas for your summer vacation.

My beautiful family was delighted when I announced that Atlantis - Paradise Island Resorts had given us a free Influencer Package that included an all-expenses paid trip to their "gorgeous" beaches and casinos. My angelic children were excited to be in another one of our viral family vlogs, so my (fourth) husband and I packed up the cameras and arrived at the hotel after our 18 hour flight. The bellhop was incredibly rude and pretended to struggle under the weight of our 12 suitcases (one for each of the kiddos), each equipped with an iPad and three different outfits hand-selected by their mother for the three different videos we were going to make.

Unfortunately, nobody had informed us that there would be so much sand here.

While dressing all my children in matching leather outfits we got from John Travolta's estate sale was economical, it certainly was ill-advisable considering that the leather was coated in some sort of fragrance that attracts crabs and lobsters.

Let's just say the scene on the beach that day was nothing short of a massacre.

We're talking giant, 20-foot lobsters and crabs. And what's worse is that my idiot husband forgot to pack the drone, so we only got handheld footage of the attack.

There goes our Streamy award.

Well after that catastrophe, the remaining children and I decided to check out the casino part of the hotel. After giving each kiddo a crisp $100, I told them that whoever came back with $10k first would get extra cocomelon. I hit up the bar and got a Manhattan, extremely dry. After about my fifth drink, I started noticing the guy at the other end of the bar. He was something of an extremely attractive, gorgeous, star-fallen-from-the-heavens man. Then he sat next to me and I realized it was Dan Ackroyd, creator of Crystal Skull Vodka. Oh brother. He told me he had come to move his business to the Bahamas for the low taxes they had and was wondering if I'd like to purchase a case. I told him to shove it and just make another Ghostbusters if he wanted money so bad. At this point, my husband returned from the ER with the remaining kids and found me.

"HOW DARE YOU ONLY GIVE THE CHILDREN ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS! THEY'RE NEVER GONNA WIN BIG THAT WAY!"

We ended up missing our flight.

11/10: YES to Prison for Kids!

Please!! I beg of you!! Send your children to this life changing summer camp at ADX state penitentiary. Give your delinquent child a chance to get their life straight. After being voted the “Mid-est prison in America” and operating in Adam’s County, Iowa they can guarantee your safety from the relentless social services. God they’re always on back. Like DON’T TELL ME HOW TO RAISE MY KIDS!!!

All you have to do is use a fake name and who’s to know. Your children can participate in fun activities like volunteer bathroom cleaning, license plate making, bench pressing, and theatre.

The Best Movies TO WATCH ON A PLANE

SULLY

Okay so yes there's a pretty bad plane crash in this movie but then the rest of it is like a court case and it'll make you sleepy, and you'll wake up at your destination!.

FINAL DESTINATION

Now this is a movie that takes place on a plane, so it's going to be super immersive if you watch it while also on a plane. I'll confess I haven't seen this one, but they've made like 50 of these so it's gotta be good.

TOP GUN

Now this is a fun one! With an impeccable cast, real stunts, and a catchy soundtrack, this is a movie you NEED to see on a plane. If you go through turbulence when watching, it feels like you're right there alongside Tom Cruise!

ANY SNUFF FILM

Okay so full disclosure here, I got this idea from Riverdale Season 5. You'll probably have to download a snuff film to watch before you leave, because I don't think the major airlines show movies of people getting actually murdered. But the lack of distractions on a flight will allow you to search the background for any clues that may help you solve the mystery and bring justice to this town.

B B C The UK Finally Admits Brexit NEWS Was a Stupid Idea

At Weast I Dint Get Shot Up in Maffs Luv X

For those wanting to visit the UK, why? Britain has been on their long tirade of not being like the other girls and the people are over it. On January 31st, 2020, the UK officially withdrew from the European Union because they thought they were too cool. If Queen Elizabeth II, may her soul rest in hell, had lived long enough to see what Britain has become today, I'm sure she would have said something along the lines of, "What the bloody hell are those fucking tossers doing down there in parliament? Leave the EU? What a load of absolute bollocks". While she may not be a good person, Queen Lizzies got a point. British citizens have wised up to the fact that leaving the union that made a majority of their exports (like olive oil, wine, and hot people) might not have been the greatest idea. Now, they have been putting pressure on Parliament to fix this issue. Current Prime Minister, Keir Starmer, has especially been dealing with a lot of backlash with his approval rate nose diving to a number somewhere between jackshit and fuck all.

However, in a rare turn of events, Starmer was able to admit that they had in fact made a bit of a mistake. Starmer recently has come out with a public announcement admitting that they had indeed gotten themselves into a kerfuffle: "I won't lie mate, this whole Brexit situation is a bit rough, innit. To be frank, I fink de night we made it official I had a few guinness round the back and I was three sheets to de wind so I just agreed wif Parliament. My bad, bruv." The British government is scrambling to fix their mistake, but is it too late?

7 Travel SCPs to watch out for on your next trip

The Special Containment Procedure (SCP) Foundation is devoted to concealing the existence of anomalous creatures and objects. These organisms are contained and protected until we can fully assimilate to their kind. However, we found that certain anomalies are particularly ubiquitous to the general public on vacation. It is imperative we recognize these entities and maintain a safe distance. Here are the 9 vacation SCPs to look out for:

1. Towel Man

Look out for: A six-fingered man emerging from a towel

Usually spotted: Beaches, coasts

Perceived threat: 4/10 - Though he looks sinister, the extent to his evil is catcalling random women. Got inappropriate with a 17 year old in college.

2. Airport TSA Agent

Look out for: "People" wearing a Spirit Halloween police officer costume

Usually spotted: Airport TSA precheck

Perceived threat: 9/10 - incredibly hostile, will not hesitate to yell, often relegated to repetitive phrases "SHOES OFF, COATS OFF, ELECTRONICS IN THE BOX"

WARNING!

3. The Kid Behind You On the Plane

Look out for: snotty, whiney little white kid

Usually spotted: the seat behind yours

Perceived threat: 7/10 - will stop at nothing to make your 5 hour flight as uncomfortable as possible, will repeatedly scream, cry, and kick the back of your chair

4. The person in front of you on the plane

Look out for: old person

Usually spotted: the seat in front of yours

Perceived threat: 6/10 - slights you by reclining as far back as possible, the more vicious mobs snore obnoxiously loud

WARNING!

5. Madame Tussaud's Wax Sculptures

Look out for: wax sculptures

Usually spotted: tourist traps, Madame Tussauds museums

Perceived threat: 10/10 - though advertised as "wax sculptures," they are sentient and come alive at night when the museum closes. Special insight tells us they plot to "eliminate" and replace their real life counterparts.

6. Couple that just got engaged at Disney World

Look out for: millennial humanoids, large cheering crowds, excessive PDA

Usually spotted: long lines of roller coasters, in front of the Magic Kingdom Castle

Perceived threat: 1/10 - highly invasive species, obtrusive

WARNING!

7. Eighth Grade DC Class

Look out for: large crowds of tweens, boys sporting neon yellow nike outfits, Edikted tops
Usually spotted: monuments and museums in DC

Perceived threat: 10/10 - never cross middle schooler SCPs, extremely hostile entities

Special Travel Tips from United

Best ways to avoid jetlag while traveling:

1. Don't listen to what they say about not sleeping until nighttime, you should sleep as soon as you step off the plane. Literally. Get your blanket and your pillow, and lie down in the middle of the airport, hell, the catwalk.
2. Smoke a fat bowl (the no smoking signs do not refer to cannabis)
3. Reset your biological clock and have children
4. Did you notice we skipped #3?
5. Haha, you checked, dumbass!
6. Viagra is surprisingly good for jet lag, at least you know something will get up by the time you land.
7. Make sure you're taking a plane, not a jet.
8. Scream "I DOTH REBUKE THEE, JETLAG"
9. Jump off the plane, just jump off.

C'mon Down To Middlesburg!

Are we North, East, South, or West? Well, just come on over here! Welcome to the dead center of the United States, where every corner of our nation's culture converges into a great, glorious field of nothing! Also, Vince Vaughn was born here!

We Have Plenty of Things To Do! (Promise!)

Middlesburg is home to the World's Largest Middle Finger! People come from far and wide to see our town monument. 'Fingie' (as locals affectionately refer to it) is thirty feet tall, seventeen feet wide, and four feet in circumference. Furthermore, it's made entirely from the hangnails and dead skin cells of Middlesburg residents. Talk about sustainable materials! Having difficulty locating our great statue? Look no further- it's right in front of Middlesburg Middle School!

Stared at Fingie for long enough? Grab a bite of our local cuisine! To start, I recommend the #4 Pit, Pit, Hooray! (a dish made only from the pits of avocados, scooped out and crammed into a deliciously foggy jar). Then for the main course, try a #7 Ol' Meatpile (the filling of a burrito dumped out onto the "middle" of your plate). And don't forget desert! Try our #12 Cream Machine (donut filling, half-a-dozen Oreo centers, and, to top it off, the middle of a Tootsie Pop). Remember, it's custom around here to top each meal with a pizza saver (you know, those mini white table things jammed into the middle of the pizza?) So if you see that piece of tiny plastic furniture interrupting the feng shui of your plate, don't go giving your waiter the stink eye!

...Also, Vince Vaughn was born here!

I'm not bored, why do you ask? If it seems you've run out of things to do (which is simply impossible in a town like Middlesburg!) just sit back in my uncle's rocking chair and take a long sip of that Americano. Yes, my uncle does have a cappuccino machine! Get in line, he shares it with the whole town. In Middlesburg, generosity truly is the golden rule. And if you somehow get bored of all that, my uncle has The Searchers on VHS!

A Hop, Skip, and Another Skip Away!

We're just a nine hour drive from Manhattan and a two hour speed-walk from L.A. (Hm, how does that work?) Don't believe what Detroit tells you, Middlesburg is the REAL home of America's auto industry. Rental car sites can be found by the dog grooming place with the faded tie-dye sign, by the old pine tree with "I ♥ Barbara" carved into it, and that is it. So if you happen to fly in (man, that'd be a treat!) pick up one of our cars and glide down the same roads where Vince Vaughn learned to drive.

For the Brandy Melville Regulars: Petite Airlines

For years, airlines have done their best to accommodate the “horizontally-challenged people”. We’ve given you your seatbelt extenders, complimentary extra seats to fit your bovine behinds, and even additional unsalted nuts upon request. But what about the horizontally-disadvantaged? The concave collective? The itchy bitsy individuals? Times have changed. We have complained about the dangers of flying commercial sized flights for years and yet our cries have gone unanswered. Those gaps on the plane window may not pose a threat to those of you with larger magnitudes, but us tiny individuals live in fear of flying through the gap each time we fly because we’re just so small that a light gust could blow us away. Well, we hear you and we are happy to announce the launch of our brand new airline. From the same people that gave you the doors at Brandy Melville, we present to you: Petite Airlines, where the only thing thinner than the air, is us! Petite Airlines is the first airline exclusively made to accommodate an undervalued and marginalized community: the skinnies. Petite Airlines caters to our passengers’ every need such as our specially designed corset seat belts. For our refreshments we provide complimentary water without that caloric hydrogen and for our in-flight meal we offer a single cigarette that gets passed around the entire plane. Also, Petite Airlines is the most environmentally friendly airline because of how little fuel we need to carry out max weight load (if you need to ask what the max weight is, don’t bother getting on). And before you say anything, no, we are not fat shaming, we are simply skinny encouraging. If you join our rewards program today we’ll give you an extra two puffs on the in-flight cigarette on your next flight. So come fly with us, Petite Airlines because nothing tastes better than flying skinny feels.

Billy Vanderbuilt Rockerfuller Barthalmuel V wakes in his Massachusetts mansion on his ninth birthday to a cake presented to him by his nanny on behalf of his parents, who are sorry to miss the celebrations, but had to attend the inauguration of their close friend Donald.

Enough, Billy thinks, as he takes his parents credit cards, charters one of the jets, and drags Nanny on board.

He calls his white rich elite private school, and with promises of candy cigars and sparkling apple cider served in champagne flutes, entices his third grade art teacher to join him on a trip to Japan to watch him assert his status as karate master of the universe. He accidentally calls her 'mom' on the phone several times: shockingly, he is rejected. He must go all alone (since obviously Nanny does not qualify as a person).

Billy lands in Japan and drags 94 year old Nanny to the top of Mt Fuji, where he believes he will undoubtedly find the current karate master of the universe, who is ready to be dethroned.

After 37 years, no one having shown, Billy begins to think his skills must be more intimidating than he thought. Decides he must already BE the karate master of the universe. Art teacher will be thrilled. He knows he can win her over with his skills, but a grand gesture wouldn't be a grand gesture at all if it didn't involve stealing the Mona Lisa from the Louvre. Nanny, now in her prime 131 years young, stays with him because this is the most paid vacation she's gotten in decades.

He and the jet, which has also just been waiting there for the last 37 years, depart to Paris to go run the heist. Billy is confident he can beat and bypass all the security guards that have trained for decades in their respective martial arts because he has something they don't: He's watched every iteration of Avatar the last airbender, even the shitty M. Night Shyamalan one. As he breaks into the Louvre, the guards immediately surround him so he attempts to firebend. The guards are cold, unfeeling, distant. 'Dad?' he says, to no response. He doesn't firebend, but he does release a fart that's been fermenting for 37 years, knocking the guards unconscious.

So, he does manage to take the Mona Lisa, but after stealing it, has Nanny film him with the painting, bragging about the theft, and post the videos online. He is tracked down immediately. Police found Billy just casually sitting by a cafe, eating an entire baguette in one hand and the Mona Lisa in another. He does engage with them briefly in a fencing match, using said baguette, but they easily disarm and attain him.

Billy sits in prison for another 30 years. Eventually his parents answer his calls, send enough money to Nanny (still alive) for bail.

Goes straight back to school to propose to the art teacher, who shockingly still works there, tracks her down to find she has in fact been married for several years, has several children, and does not remember him.

He shows up empty handed, but gets on his knees proposing with his parent's credit card. She emphatically says yes, quite literally leaving her husband in the dust and they lived happily ever after.

My name is Nathan, I'm a recovering stockbroker and this is my story. I'm a 35-year-old working at Goldman Sachs and I was in desperate need of pictures for my Raya profile. I needed something to show I'm worldly, and that I exist outside of the Wall Street bubble. So, I'll be embarking on an expedition to the Himalayas. Now I'll admit, I'm a city man at heart. The city never looks more beautiful than when I gaze at it outside the back seat of an Uber tweaked out of my mind due to the several lines of coke I did in the Goldman bathroom. Arriving at the Air BNB, I was immediately taken into custody by the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) because I fell right into their trap by booking a reservation at the "Dalai lama Air BNB." And that's where it all started going wrong.

jet boy

in school they used to call me jet boy not because i could sing like a jet like how the jet gang sang in west side story although i did enjoy rita moreno in that movie

in school they used to call me jet boy not because i was fast like a jet i was always the first one out in the fitness gram pacer test

in school they used to call me jet boy not because i could fight like a jet i've never been in a fight and i don't have much upper body strength

in school they used to call me jet boy not because i wanted to fly like a jet i've always been interested in real estate the idea of being a pilot always kinda freaked me out

in school they used to call me jet boy because i have a pointy metal beak and giant aerodynamic wings and turbo engines

in school they used to call me jet boy because i am a jet who will always long to be a real boy

THE TRAGIC TALE OF PERICLESIUS

God reduces Chaos into order. He separates the four elements, and disposes the several bodies, of which the universe is formed, into their proper situations. At first, the sea, the earth, and the heaven, which covers all things, were the only face of nature throughout the whole universe, which men have named Chaos; a rude and undigested mass, and nothing more than an inert weight, and the discordant atoms of things not harmonizing, heaped together in the same spot.

And with this heap, I had stumbled upon the Gods' creation of Chaos and I had decided to put my best man upon a system of organization for it.

'O, Periclesius!'

I shouted to my second-best man, as my best man had been beset by a peculiar illness that day.

'Yeah what's up,' said Periclesius.

'I bestow upon thou the daunting yet important task of pleasing the Gods by bringing order to this world of Chaos.'

'Okay sure,' said Periclesius.

And so Periclesius set out to bring order to the world of Chaos.

He fashioned a strong boat out of wood from the banks of the Nile and set sail down the river to ponder the question.

Nymphs and Sirens called out to him across the way, yet he paid them no mind.

Cupid struck him with an arrow, but the manner of love too was given no attention by Periclesius, still deep in thought.

So deep in thought was dear Periclesius that he did not notice the Gods watching him from above, Jupiter and Jove, as well as Poseidon.

'We gotta do something about that guy,' Jupiter turned to Poseidon.

'No mortal should be that deep in thought. He'll become too powerful.'

'Yeah okay,' said Poseidon. 'I'll do something.'

THE TRAGIC TALE OF PERICLESIUS

And so it was that Periclesius suddenly found himself at the water's edge, as his boat came upon a waterfall.

And he surfaced, splashing the water around him, and exclaimed to the heavens: 'By Jove, I've got it! I know how to restore order! A simple method of bringing people from here to there. A large wooden structure, under the tension of many men and horses, that suddenly releases a human and sends them flying!'

Periclesius returned to me and told me of his invention. I applauded his creation. It brought smiles to the men, weary from the Chaos of the universe.

But what name would be given to this invention? This act of genius?

'I've got it,' exclaimed the mortal. 'I'll call it a... a...'

Periclesius looked around and spotted a feline walking nearby.

'A cat! A cat.. Uhh.. uhhh. Uhhh. A cat, uhh...'

Periclesius looked to his right and saw a large stick holding up a flag.

'Uhhh... pole! A cata-pole!'

'That's a stupid name,' I told Periclesius.

'Every good word has to end in the letter τ.'

And so it was that my invention, the Catapult, was born.

And thus Chaos was no more.

LOVE (ON AN) ISLAND

O my love, where has our ship gone
Departed? How can it be, we were only late by an hour or perhaps three
Alone on this island how can we carry on Without a McDonalds, a Wendy's or an Arby's to see

What's that my angel? You hast something to confess?
You hath been fucking my ex!
By and By, come now, you surely jest

You know what, leaveth me thine homosexual

To think my honniest of moons ruined
And not even by my man when he cum too soon
How fickle faith canst be when men are just so fucking stupid
Why aim for the stars to not even find a place

New Lionsgate Entertainment Park for Adventure Loving Guests!

In a world where Harry Potter world has grossed millions of dollars for Universal Studios and Warner Brothers, where people clamor and wait in hour long lines just to experience the wonderful wizarding world of their favorite characters, it only seemed like a matter of time until the next ultra-realistic interactive park experience was created for a different wildly successful book series.

Lionsgate Entertainment is proud to introduce the Hunger Games Games: a life-size billion dollar reenactment of the infamous book series with real life stakes. Experience the thrill of being chased to death through the woods by your peers. Fight against starvation and malnutrition in District 12. Use your bow and arrow skills to illegally hunt for squirrel meat to trade on the black market at the risk of federal execution. Just like Katniss!

You think the class divide in modern day America is bad? You haven't seen NOTHING yet. Experience the tangible misery of living on the outskirts of an ultra-oppressive dystopian society and experience fear like no other when your name is called in the annual reaping causing you to be killed for sport at the ripe age of sixteen! Just like Katniss!

Will you be an overworked and underpaid coal miner working in deplorable and dangerous conditions? Will you conspire against the government only to have your tongue cut out? Or maybe you'll be a local baker's boy with an unfortunate pun for a name. The possibilities are endless!

Here at Lionsgate Entertainment we don't believe the fun should have to end when you leave the park either, which is why the Hunger Games Games also offers the lifelong experience of complex and incurable PTSD, anxiety attacks, sleep disorders and more! Just like Katniss!

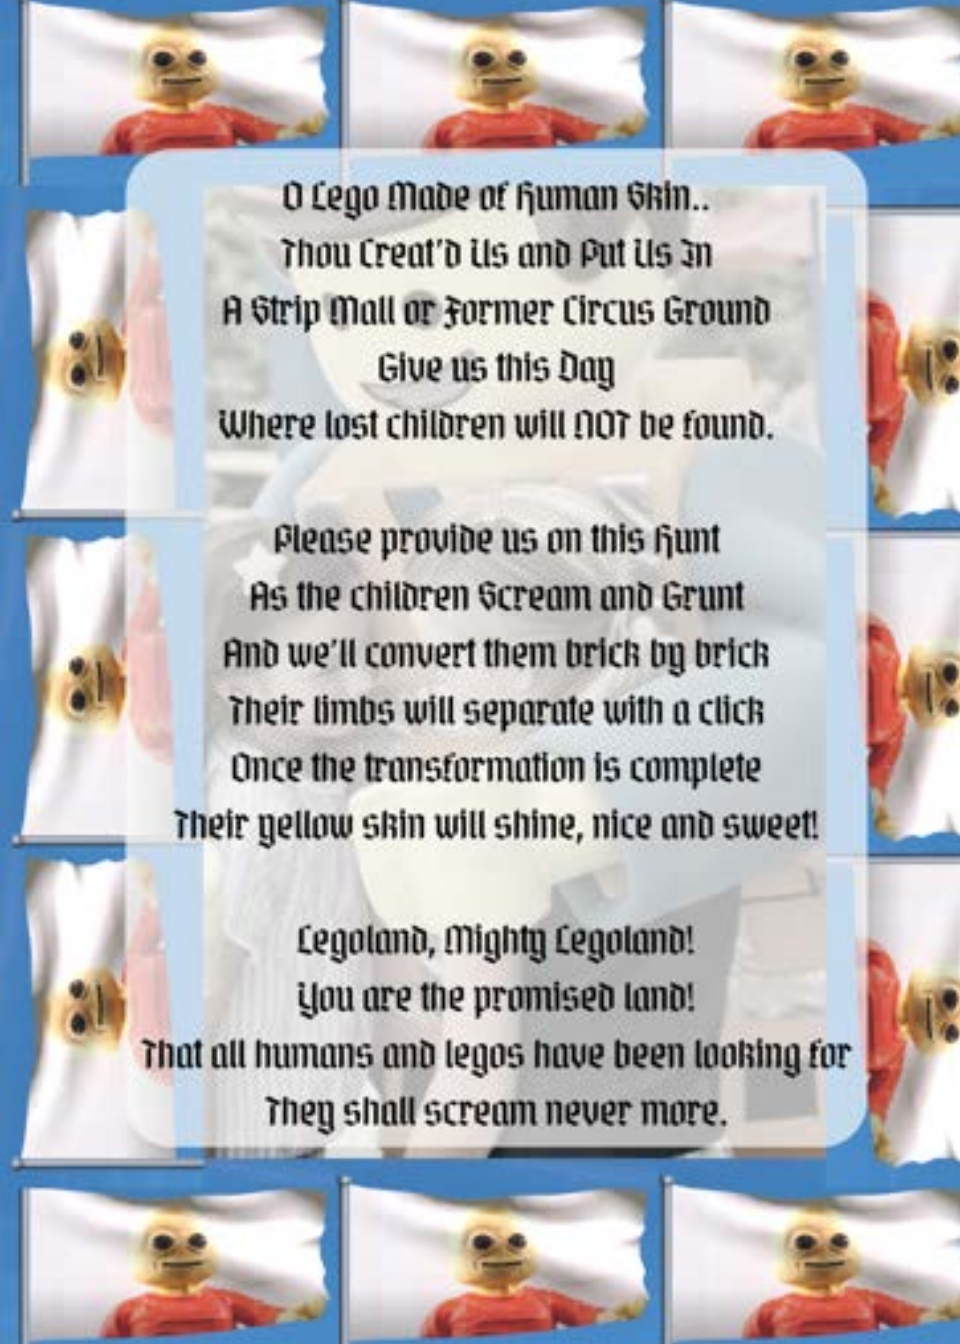

All this and more is waiting for you at this new Hunger Games experience! So don't wait, book tickets for the low cost of $13,250 today, or buy the family bundle for $48,960 for five people and save $17290! From the entire Lionsgate Entertainment family, we can't wait to see you there!

I went on Netflix's new dating show, Fireside Chats and don't know how to feel abt it.....

I am proud to say I recently married the love of my life, however, with the recent advancement of sex robots, his escort agency has taken a bit of a nose dive and we found ourselves strapped for cash. With too much money tied into the wedding and the rest invested in DogeCoin, I knew I had to get creative with our honeymoon plans. Desperately scrolling through Reddit, searching for peers in a similar position, I received a popup ad from everyone's second favorite streaming platform, Netflix. I clicked on the link and was immediately captivated by the offer: "Enjoy a two month tropical vacation for you and that special someone."

Two months later we were heading to Fiji only to discover we were contestants on Netflix's new dating show "Fireside Chats," a play on FDR's famous late night radio program in which FDR spoke with his constituents and kept everyday Americans up-to-date with enlightening topics such as the Great Depression, the dust bowl, and Hitler's rise to power in Europe. This new program took that same premise of absolute democratic transparency and filled it with the alcohol-induced tantric sex it so desperately needed.

Every couple was immediately separated upon arrival, the girls lived in one dormitory that only had one Alaskan King sized bed and one prison cell-sized shower (but like a Scandinavian prison) to encourage hot lesbian kissing for the men at home watching. The boys all got their own rooms. I was less than thrilled to learn the actual premise of the game.

Each night all 20 contestants gathered around the fire and were force to debate increasingly complex historical dilemmas from the mid 20th century such as "did the expansion of government departments such as the FBI and CIA over-extend the government's reach therefor fostering a culture of distrust of the government among the American people" or "did Japan really deserve TWO bombs?"

The debates were vigorously fact checked and if you ever lied two oiled up Love Island rejects came out and picked you up while chanting "misinformation is the killer of democracy!" and "FDR is the third best American president, how dare you disgrace his legacy!" The last person standing then got to choose who they got to spend the night with.

I was overjoyed when my husband ended up winning and looked forward to finally consummating our marriage in this sticky Airbnb, however, he instead chose to spend the night with Mike, the first man eliminated after he tried to argue that North Korea was responsible for wiping out dozens of Russian battalions on the eastern front (North Korea of course didn't exist until after the then-unified Korea was liberated from Japan, duh!). We never did end up consummating our marriage, which in the end made our marriage annulment much easier after my husband informed me he had fallen in love with Mike and they had decided to run away together to start their own podcast.

As part of SouthWest Airlines new customer satisfaction initiative, the smell of flyer's food must be approved before boarding.

Due to an astronomical amount of complaints of smelly food on our planes. Customers with pungent meals are NOT PERMITTED

And we're not just talking about your salmon Cathy or your Bumble Bee Tuna Gary. "good" smelling food items are also NOT PERMITTED.

That means no Subway, Popeyes, Chcik-fila, Pubsubs, or your reheated Olive Garden. It's distracting and creates a culture of inequality on any given plane.

So think about that next time so consider ordering that 6 inch. Instead we demand that you stick to our designated Southwest trail mix, now available in most grocery stores near you

Any party who fights with our expert Southwest Smellers will have their ticket ripped up or deleted in front of them.

FSH-UA 101 Fishing 101 for non-Practicing Pescatarians

School: (Unaffiliated with NYU)

Schedule: Sundays 9:00am-9:00pm

Term: Summer 2025

Professor: Steve Anubis (TA: Ra)

Welcome to beautiful Cairo, Egypt! While the Nile may not support marine life, that won't stop you from fishing. Using state-of-the-art artificial intelligence, we have developed a patent-pending "Fishing Buddy" to assist you in your fishing endeavors, held entirely online. Be wary as we explore how to bait, gut, and filet a fish. Filet-o-fish? The course grade is dependent upon your performance in four midterm exams and one written response in which you reflect on your reality; are you fishing? Are we fishing? Are there fish? Is there a body of water? Is it a mirage? Are you a mirage? Marriage? Carriage? Your course grade will also depend upon a two-part final: the first part consists of catching a fish, and the second part will have you forming a codependent relationship with Johnny Morris, current CEO of Bass Pro Shops, in which you guilt-trip him into allowing you to take over the company and its whimsical business tactics. If time permits, we will ask you to beat Bill Dance, television host, in a riveting game of Dance Dance Revolution, named after Bill Dance, the namesake of Dance Dance Revolution.

Prerequisites: Fishing 001, Cultures and Contexts: Fish Culture

Corequisites: Fishing 101 Lab, Fishing 101 Recitation, Advanced Topics in Fishing (any FSH-UA 500 course listing)

Aloha, students! Cancún is a historically beautiful location on the Mexican coast. For anyone curious about the culture, local politics and unique essence of this exotic city, join me in a deep ethnographic study of the complex population of the Blooming Gardens Gated Community and Assisted Living at the heart of this fascinating community. Learn local secrets, discover delectable cuisines and become a local yourself. No Spanish-speaking experience is needed for this anthropological course; in fact, it is strongly discouraged. By the end of the semester, each student will present their final project of converting other aging Americans to join this vibrant city. The beautiful thing about the American dream is that we can inflict it on locals anywhere!
